PROVEN "EFFECTIVE TREATMENT" — Tropisan tablets taken as directed have proven to be an effective treatment in many thousand cases. Many of these psoriasis sufferers have tried ointments, unguents, lotions and external applications with little success. Now Tropisan tablets have proven themselves to be an "effective treatment" in the relief of external psoriasis symptoms.

EVERY REPORTED CASE STATED THAT TROPISAN TABLETS RELIEVED SYMPTOMS TO SOME DEGREE WITH CONTINUOUS USE — Even people who had suffered disappointment after disappointment with almost every type and variety of treatment . . . people whose crusts and scales would not fade with other medications . . . now found Tropisan tablets relieved symptoms. Yes, the itching stopped, the crusts, scales, oozing poled into invisibility . . . their friends forget they had psoriasis.

STRIKES AT INTERNAL SOURCE—NOT JUST SURFACE SYMPTOMS— Almost all medical doctors believe that psoriasis occurs because of internal causes, possibly faulty fat metabolism. Tropisan is designed to strike at this possible basic source—not just to act as a messy sticky goo for surface application. Every psoriasis sufferer wants the cause eliminated, not just the external symptoms.

FOOTBALL HERO

JOHN MARINER wasn't the type of football coach who would ever admit defeat. The student body at Winton College constantly repeated the statement he had made famous.

"What the fool calls defeat is often one step before victory if you got enough guts to keep on going when everything looks black."

And so at the given moment he was practicing his own philosophy as he sat in his office in the Athletic Building. Opposite him was a tall, well built brown eyed boy who tipped the scales at two hundred and twenty pounds. Every inch of him was muscle and he was a natural for the football team.

"Look here, Pete," said the coach, "I know you have a very good reason for not coming out for the team. You can't imagine how happy I was when the Dean told me you had decided to come to our college. I figured around you could be built the kind of team that would bring victory to our institution. What's wrong?"

Pete Renson bit his underlip as though he were struggling to keep the words from getting out. He just gazed at the coach and shrugged his shoulders.

"I have a good average and I want to be an honor student. Football will take up a lot of my time and my marks may suffer. Take it at that and just leave me alone."

The coach had to do some quick thinking. You just can't call a fellow a liar. Or can you, if you know how to use the proper words?

"I'll tell you what's bothering you deep down in your heart. Maybe the psychologists would call it the subconscious. You're worried that people will always compare you to your brother Ben. You feel that they are always going to say behind your back that you aren't up to the standard set by your brother; that he taught you everything he knew; that you got into football on his glory. Well, am I right?"

Pete Renson clinched his two fists. He just felt like striking out at the coach. It hurt a lot when another human being has the ability to get right under your skin and know what the trouble is that is eating at your heart. He counted ten to himself and said nothing. There was nothing to say for the very expression on his face showed the coach had struck home. So he merely turned around and left the room. When he shut the door behind him, he found himself facing his girl in the corridor.

"You look mad enough to fight an elephant or a lion," teased pretty blue eyed Joan Carry. "Calm down or you'll break a blood vessel. Suppose we take a walk down the old campus road."

For fifteen minutes the two walked side by side. Not a word had been spoken until Pete Renson made the challenge.

"Aren't you even going to ask me what I told the coach?"

Joan forced a smile over her face.

"You told coach Mariner you didn't want to play football. If that's what is in your mind then there is no use talking about it. We have other things to think about. You are going to take me on a picnic for two to the State Park tomorrow."

Mother Nature did her best to shoo away the clouds. And just now Pete Renson was in a sort of paradise. His head rested on Joan's lap and he wanted to tell Father Time to stop ticking away the seconds and keep this perfect moment of happiness forever. Then his eyes spotted a group of kids playing football. In a moment he was on his feet, followed by Joan. He watched the kids tackle, pass, run for the goal. Then he spoke to a twelve year old who looked like the captain.

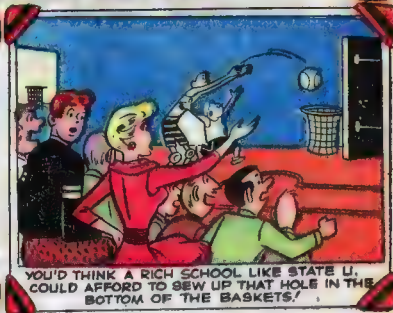

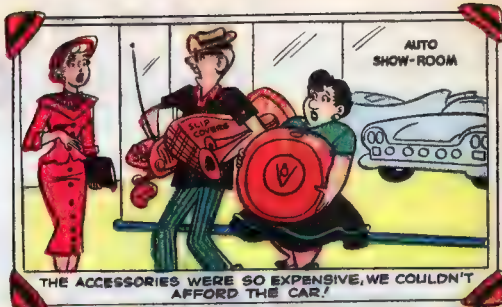

"Look here son," he began, "you and your team have the wrong concept about blocking. Effective blocking is the foundation of all offense. You block for just one of two reasons. Either to keep the other fellow away from the ball. Or to keep him away from the path of the ball. If you keep up what you call blocking you will end up with some fractures. You just block because it seems exciting to do so."

Twelve year old Mike Gorsky wasn't going to let any big guy tell him about football.

"Look here mister," he snapped back, "I don't think you know anything except to yell at kids. Show us how you can throw a ball and maybe we'll listen to you."

And finishing these words, Mike threw the football to Pete. He caught it and for the next hour poor Joan sat on the sidelines. But Pete Renson was in all his glory. He even imagined he was again leading his team at Madison High School to victory. When he took time out for a little chat with Joan, Mike Gorsky came up to him.

"We never saw anything like that before, mister. Only one guy could play football like that. You must be the famous Pete Renson from Madison High School. And now you are at Winston College. Am I right, mister? My brother told me all about you."

Pete's two eyes almost popped right out of his head. A big grin came over his face and he patted Mike on the head.

"You got me straight, kid. See you again."

Joan drove the car back to the college for Pete just sat in the seat and had a far away look on his face. Then Joan brought him right back to earth.

"Next Saturday evening, Phi Delta is having a party for the football team. Are you going to take me or will I have to spend that evening at home by myself trying to solve a crossword puzzle?"

Pete just whistled and shook his head in a manner that told Joan not only would he take her but he was weakening about the team.

Came Saturday evening and there was excitement at the Phi Delta house. Coach John Mariner looked like a man with a big secret. And at ten thirty when the gang went into the large dining room for eats the secret was out. There in the flesh himself was Ben Renson. Pete went over to his brother and spoke to him.

"What a surprise! Why didn't you tell me you were coming? What's up?"

Ben Renson had the answer and looked at Joan with a fatherly glance.

"Maybe mother sent me here to give your girl the O.K. If so, she's got it. But I have to be back on the West Coast before morning. There's a private plane waiting for me at the airfield. Coach wants me to say a few words."

"Look here, you fellows who want to play ball," began Ben Renson, "I want to say never let anything stop you from getting on the team. I was lucky. Sure, I'm older than Pete but he would get on the field with me and show me lots of tricks. He's a natural and I'm lucky to have a brother like him who is going to make football history!"

The crowd cheered loudly and they all crowded around Ben. But he had only time for Pete and Joan.

"You get on the team and show them you were and will always be better than your older brother. I've got to get back to the airfield. Best of luck to you and Joan."

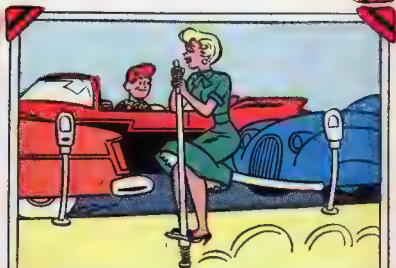

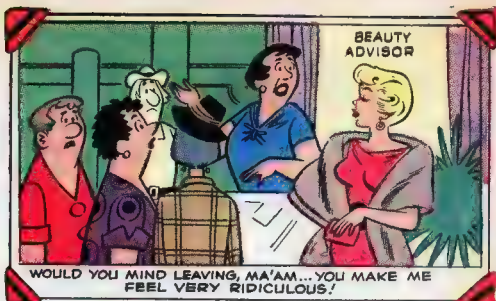

Western University played the first game with Winston College. It was to be a game just to warm up the boys from Western who had been collected via the scholarships. Jim Reilly, the sports writer called it a "massacre with the underdogs doing the killing." In case you forgot, Winston beat Western by 37 to 6. On the sidelines coach John Mariner said to Joan: "Clever of me, wasn't it, to call up Ben Renson on long distance, explain the situation and get him to come down and make that cute speech."

"Clever of me, wasn't it," snapped back Joan, "to get those kids to be at the park with the football. And I promised to buy them all new uniforms if Pete joined the team."
